"To serve native trade and native art"- this was how Empress Elizabeth, daughter of Peter the Great, formulated the aims of Russia's first porcelain factory, which she established in 1744. 1).....

Over two hundred and seventy years have passed - over 270 years of unique, remarkable, difficult and highly interesting history for the first Russian porcelain factory.

About 100 years after its foundation, the factory, which until then had belonged to the ruling house of Romanov, was proclaimed the Imperial Porcelain Factory. After the October Revolution of 1917 it was nationalised and renamed the State Porcelain Works.

2) ..... Since 1993 it has been reorganized as the "Lomonosov Porcelain Factory", a private joint-stock company.

3) ..... During the Soviet era leading masters of fine and applied arts, expert technologists, workers and engineers continued the tradition. The best of Russian decorative porcelain from the Lomonosov factory today takes pride of place in the rich Petersburg collections, both in the Hermitage and the Russian Museum, as well as the palace Museums of Pavlovsk, Petrodvorets and Tsarskoe Selo, the State Historical Museum in Moscow and the Ceramics Museum of Kuskovo, and thus are part of the rich fund of Russian and international art. 4).....

The Museum of the Petersburg Porcelain factory, established in 1844, contains some 20,000 exhibits.

For more than two and a half centuries factory on the banks of the Neva has been in the forefront of high class porcelain production. 5).....

A. There are many important foreign collectors who own such pieces.

B. During the early 1750s we also find the first reports about the production of "porcelain dolls"- figures of people and animals.

C. Dmitri Vinogradov also worked here for the well-being and the benefit of the fatherland and was the originator of Russian porcelain.

D. Russian porcelain owes its existence to notable Russian and foreign sculptors, painters, architects, scholars and artisans.

E. Its products are of immense cultural value to the country and set the yardstick for artistic form and quality of execution.

F. In 1925, however, on the occasion of the 200th jubilee of the Russian Academy of Science, it was given the name of the academy's founder, Mikhail Lomonosov, and until recently it was called the Leningrad Lomonosov Porcelain Works.
